GENDER-TRANSFORMATIVE SPORT

Farida Azizova, a 21-year-old taekwondo champion from Azerbaijan talks about the barriers women face in sports. She speaks out to break down these barriers and promote higher participation of women and girls in sports.

The low participation is due to cultural norms and gender stereotypes prevailing in society, prescribing sport as a domain mainly dominated by men.

Through gender-transformative action, her initiative aims at transforming this view to make sport a more inclusive and gender-balanced environment in which women and girls have the same opportunities as men and boys to express themselves at their highest potential. Ms. Azizova is using her status as a champion to urge girls to pursue their dreams, no matter what people tell them.

KYRGYZSTAN

Within the frame of the EECA RO-funded projects “Partnering with men and boys for gender justice”, UNFPA Kyrgyzstan and NGO “Men against violence” started the training “Stop Violence” for the local administration of “Ak-Jar” in Bishkek. The project entails a series of formative trainings for the group who will promote non-violent behavior in their community.

Participants who have completed the program will receive the skills that help them approach gender violence as a men’s issue, not just a woman’s issue, determine what violence and violent behaviors are, recognize signs that predict possible aggression and other useful knowledge.

Participants were sharing their understanding of gender equality, gender stereotypes. They were asked: Can men support gender equality and learn to live gender-equitable lives? What is your understanding of “Real Kyrgyz Man”?

STOP VIOLENCE

The IMAGES survey conducted by UNFPA shows that 43% of surveyed girls, 11 grade students, do not want their future husband be like their fathers. According to DHS, wife beating is tolerated by 34% women and 50% men, who justify it by circumstances like family quarrels, neglect of the children, or if a woman is going out without asking permission from her husband. All these data were presented to participants.

FATHERS AND DADS

Zoran Stanojevic, a well-known Serbian journalist and editor of Radio Television of Serbia, wrote an article on the difference between being father and being dad. The article was created as part of the "Super Dad" campaign supported by UNFPA and CARE International Balkans as well of the global fatherhood campaign - MenCare. It was extremely well received by the local media and was shared and commented widely on social media.

Zoran explains the difference between father as a legal category, as the name that appear in legal documents, and dad, which is "some other story. It is not that every father is a dad. Every dad doesn't have to be a father. His child pronounces him a dad. Dad is the title that has to be earned."

Otac-kolac i tata-mata – Centar E8

Svaki muškarac može da bude otac, ali baš svaki. Čak i detetu koje nije njegovo. Otac je pravna kategorija, on je ono „ime oca“ iz dokumenata. I kada je ta rubrika iz nekog razloga prazna svi znamo da taj otac negde postoji...

This article supports studies and researches proving the beneficial effect of the father's presence in the child's life, especially during the formative years. He does so by emphasizing the feelings of being a dad, what men would feel and live through the relationship with their child. "Don't ever think that dad is a weaker version of father. Much more strength and love, often more courage is needed for to be a dad." Here is the link to the English version.

DADDY, READ TO ME!

International studies suggest that fathers actively involved in their children's upbringing not only improve relations among family members, but also boost their children's confidence and future success. On average, a Ukrainian father spends approximately four minutes per day with his children, much less time than the average European father.

Based on these findings, UNFPA Ukraine and Mystetskyi Arsenal organized the awareness raising campaign "Daddy, read to me!" funded by UNFPA EECA RO. Check the video about the project here!

The project core consists of public book readings during which celebrity fathers were invited to read books to children. This event strove to highlight the importance of equal distribution of family responsibilities, as well as the role of fathers in child development. Fathers were also sharing personal insights on their fatherhood experience to show Ukrainians that men and women can and should have equally active roles raising their children.

The headliners included Vlad Yama, Yevhen Koshovyi, Taras Topolia, Oleg Skrypka, and Vasyl Virastiuk among others, while some of them participated in a special radio broadcast on Radio "Kraina FM".

In addition, two articles in "ELLE" and "Viva" magazines published interviews with the celebrity fathers about their parenting experiences.

Ukraine

On the occasion of International Father's Day celebrated on June 18, UNFPA Ukraine organized a dancing flashmob "Daddy, dance and kids" in Kyiv. Watch the video here!

According to statistics, 60 percent of Ukrainian couples end up divorcing because of unequal distribution of family responsibilities.

The main focus of the flashmob "Daddy, Dance, and Kids" was to express in the form of entertainment the importance of fathers participating in the development and upbringing of their children.

This social event was conducted in the framework of the UNFPA's "4 Hands Happiness" information campaign, a number of social events aimed at promoting the equal distribution of family responsibilities.
